III. OPENING CEREMONY

Statement by H.E. Mr. Erastus Mwencha, Deputy Chairperson for the African Union Commission

5. On behalf of the Chairperson of the AU Commission, H.E. Dr. Jean Ping, Mr. Erastus Mwencha, Deputy Chairperson of the AUC, welcomed Ministers and their delegates to the Conference. He thanked His Excellency President Mwai Kibaki, the Government and the People of Kenya for accepting to host the Conference. He stated that the recovery from the financial and economic crises is slow and most of Africa’s economies have been adversely affected by the global recession, despite the initial optimism that the global financial system would have few spillover effects on the continent.

6. He said that the mechanisms through which the crisis affected Africa included a contraction in global trade and a related collapse in primary commodity exports, on which many countries are dependent. Additionally, foreign investment, overseas development assistance (ODA) and migrant worker remittances decreased significantly. He therefore noted that issues of financing integration requires an urgent solution; if we are to accelerate Africa’s integration agenda. He pointed out that financial self-sufficiency is key to sustaining the integration process. In this regard, he commended ECOWAS and ECCAS for identifying innovative sources of financing for their integration activities and programmes. He emphasized the need to implement and adhere to... agreed actions, to garner sufficient political will to make bold decisions on pertinent issues of self-sufficiency in financing.

7. He, therefore, pointed out that the theme of the Conference ‘Integration and Sovereignty’ was timely and invited the delegations to thoroughly reflect on the actions to be taken to accelerate the integration process, through effective implementation of decisions and legal instruments adopted to that effect. He also invited the delegations to propose any necessary actions to be taken to achieve our common goals, which are integration and development of our continent.

8. He informed the Conference about the progress made on alternative sources of financing the African Union through a High Level Panel of eminent personalities, which will submit its Interim Report to the next Ordinary Session of the Assembly scheduled for January 2012 in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia and the final report at the July 2012 AU Summit. Finally he informed the Conference of the theme of the January 2012 AU Summit- ‘Boosting Intra-African Trade’.

Statement by H.E. Dr. Abdoulie Janneh UN Under-Secretary-General and Executive Secretary of ECA of United Nations Economic Commission for Africa (UNECA)

9. H.E Dr. Abdoulie Janneh expressed sincere appreciation and warm greetings to President Mwai Kibaki and the Government and People of Kenya for the warm hospitality and excellent facilities placed at the disposal of the delegates. He stated that regional integration is a necessity for Africa due to the benefits of a larger and more coherent economic space. Dr. Janneh said that Africa has long since realized the importance of regional integration as can be seen from the creation of Regional Economic Communities from as far back as the 1970s as well as the adoption of various instruments like the Lagos Plan of Action, the Abuja Treaty establishing the African Economic Community and most recently the Constitutive Act of the African Union.

10. Dr. Janneh also noted that progress is being made to fast-track regional integration in Africa. This is evidenced by common policies and programmes spanning arrangements for trade liberalization, macroeconomic convergence, and monetary and financial integration, creation of regional power pools, river basin commissions, free movement of people and commitment to improving governance and ensuring conditions for peace and security in the continent. In the area of trade, he recalled that Ministers of Trade agreed to fast-track the establishment of a Continental Free Trade Area building on the landmark decision of EAC, COMESA, and SADC to come together to create a single Free Trade Area embracing 26 countries.

11. He said that intra-Africa trade remains abysmally low at about 10% compared to rates of up to 60% in Europe while the pace of movement towards FTAs remains uneven. Infrastructure deficits remain a major challenge with limited financing for regional projects while free movement of people across Regional Economic Communities is barely existent. He stressed that Africa should not be discouraged by this situation but realize that integration is an on-going process to which the continent should lend momentum, by continuing to debate on the nature of the integration that it wants while taking inspiration from other experiences and tackling existing and emerging challenges.

12. Referring to the theme of the conference which is “Integration and Sovereignty” he stressed that there is an inverse relationship between deeper regional integration and national sovereignty and that the ultimate objective of regional integration is to enable African countries to benefit from economies of scale, reduce transactions costs and use trade as an engine of growth and development. However, he said that this would require greater transboundary cooperation, joint projects and programmes for investment and trade facilitation, and adoption of common standards and codes.

13. He invited Member States to demonstrate political commitment to the MIP and provide maximum support to RECs and the AUC including giving them the required authority and resources to implement agreed programmes and projects. Finally, he drew the attention of the Conference on the imperatives of capacity building and the generation of predictable and sustainable funding for the attainment of integration.

14. The President acknowledged the good economic performance of Africa over the past decade, largely explained by pragmatic policies, hard work and regional integration efforts, and noted that projections show that the five fastest growing economies in the world in the next decade will be in Africa. He, therefore, encouraged Member States to take concrete steps to consolidate these gains and enhance the integration agenda as a means of attaining growth and development. This will require the adoption and implementation of practical recommendations that take into account socio-economic and political realities in the continent.

15. He furthermore welcomed initiatives geared towards enhancing the integration agenda, including the Minimum Integration Programme. He, however, reminded the Conference that integration is a process, which must be achieved gradually and in stages. He underscored the importance of variable geometry in the integration process, highlighting the different stages attained by different RECs. He particularly noted the success of the EAC, COMESA and SADC Tripartite Arrangement which is a major boost to the continental integration agenda and he called upon other regions to emulate.

16. He stressed the need to identify political and social impediments to the integration process, discuss them in the spirit of mutual support and recommend appropriate measures. He also encouraged Member States to take the necessary steps to accede to the relevant instruments such as those operationalising the three Financial Institutions and implement existing decisions, protocols and treaties.
17. In concluding, he also underlined the need to enhance cooperation among African States without losing sight of the globalization phenomenon and to ensure maximum benefits are derived from our partnerships with the rest of the world with particular emphasis on the benefits of South-South cooperation.

VI. PROCEEDINGS

   a) Presentations and Panel Discussion on the Theme of the Conference:
      ‘Integration and Sovereignty’

Summary of presentation by Honourable Mr. Wycliffe Ambetsa Oparanya, Minister of State for Planning, National Development and Vision 2030, Kenya.

20. In his presentation, H.E. Mr. Wycliffe A. Oparanya, recalled that integration has been part of Africa’s development strategy from the immediate post-independence period under the Organisation of African Unity (OAU), although the main focus of the OAU had been decolonization and political liberation of the Continent. He underscored that the choice of the theme for this year’s Conference is premised on the fact that African Member States have regularly expressed a desire for stronger, deeper and a more accelerated form of integration, as articulated in the Abuja Treaty (1991) establishing the African Economic Community (AEC).

21. He recalled the slow pace of integration and invited Member States to make irrevocable commitments beyond rhetoric to accelerate the implementation of decisions and other legal instruments. He highlighted the issue of financing the integration process and underscored the need for countries to identify non-traditional financing sources to ensure sustainable funding of activities and programmes of the Union. Concerning the issue of rationalization, the Minister stressed the need for RECs that have not done so, to harmonise their activities and programmes while also emulating the experiences of the Tripartite Arrangement.

22. Finally, he emphasised that the management of regional public goods such as energy, water, environment, health need to be depoliticized and entrusted to supranational institutions at the regional and continental levels. Furthermore, he stressed that the core issue at stake is that African Member States cannot fully integrate without sacrificing aspects of their sovereignty for the common goal.

Summary of presentation by H. E. Dr. Joram Biswaro

23. In his presentation, H. E. Dr. Joram Biswaro, noted that integration and sovereignty are interdependent and not mutually exclusive. He also observed that when countries decide to integrate they must be willing to cede some aspects of their sovereignty and abide by the contractual obligations that this involves. He emphasized that in this era of globalization Africa needs to make bold decisions to integrate in order to participate more effectively in the international arena and the global financial and trading system.

24. He highlighted the poor implementation of decisions, protocols and legal instruments hampering the integration process and identified a number of factors, which have given rise to this state of affairs. In addition, he stressed that the lack of infrastructure, poor information flow, limited linkages between agriculture and industry which are needed to add value to African raw materials, inadequate movement of factors of production especially people and goods are leading to low levels of intra-African trade. Lastly, he observed that the Tripartite Arrangement and its replication by other Communities could help address some of these challenges.

Summary of the presentation by Dr. Adams Oloo

25. In his presentation, Dr. Oloo defined integration as the shifting of national activities to a new center, which is undertaken by sovereign nations as a sovereign act. In this regard, it is not that sovereign powers are being taken away but rather that the nations involved have agreed to cede some powers. He then went on to outline four imperatives/drivers of integration, which are the following: ‘affection’, ‘gains/benefits’, ‘threats’ and ‘hegemonic power’.
26. With regard to ‘affection’, it is predicated on the principle that Africans belong together, love each other and cooperate on mutually agreed goals and objectives. Concerning the ‘gains’, it takes the view that countries enter into integration arrangements because of the expectation of economic gains and other benefits. However, if countries feel there are no benefits, they pull out. With the ‘threats’, it is premised on countries feeling that they have a common threat for which they pool their security efforts. The ‘hegemonic power’ imperative is based on one single hegemonic power forcing other states to join.

27. Dr. Oloo underscored the need for Member States to be clear on whether they want to cede some of their sovereignty in order to attain integration objectives. In this regard, he stressed the importance of countries enshrining in their constitutions integration objectives and in this respect involving people, parliaments and the judiciary with a view to buying into what can become legally binding decisions. Furthermore, the presenter observed that political will and political interest are not synonymous and that the latter is measurable.

Discussions

28. During the discussion that ensued, the Conference appreciated the quality of the presentations and made several observations. It has, therefore, recognized that the process of integration is complicated but necessary, in light of the challenges of globalization. Furthermore, that the fear of dominance by larger States and the prospect of more responsibilities for those States need to be taken into account. It was also emphasized that artificial divisions and identities are undermining the pace of integration in Africa. In this regard, the Conference pointed out that common threats such as hunger, poverty and climate change, should be a motivation for deeper and accelerated integration.

29. With respect to the issue of implementation of decisions and legal instruments, the Conference raised the issue of the possible need to enforce sanctions on Member States that do not comply with agreed actions, while also leaving a possibility for harsher penalties for countries that repeatedly do not comply. Furthermore, it was also stressed that to accelerate integration efforts must be focused on supporting Least Developed Countries (LDCs) to undertake structural reforms to graduate to middle-income status.

30. The Conference noted that integration and sovereignty are complementary to each other and that the integration process should proceed in a gradual and incremental manner. In this regard, emphasis should be put on the importance of laying the foundations of integration through strengthening the economy of Member States and building the necessary infrastructure, which plays an important role in the acceleration of the integration process.

31. The Conference stressed upon the need to focus more on the achievements and opportunities that have been registered so far in integration within the regions. In this regard, best practices and experiences occurring in the different regions need to be highlighted and shared so as to accelerate the implementation of the MIP. The Conference emphasized the importance of addressing linguistic barriers and promoting African languages to encourage integration. Finally, the Conference underscored the importance of developing multinational programmes and projects in areas such as water, energy, environment and health as well as focus on fighting cross-border pandemics such as HIV/AIDS, Ebola, rift valley fever and yellow fever.

32. The Conference also highlighted the importance of assisting Least Developed Countries improve their economies in the context of accelerating the integration process. In this regard, the Conference requested the Commission, in collaboration with UNCTAD and UNECA, to develop a sustainable and effective growth and development strategy to graduate countries from Least Developed Countries (LDCs) status.

He stressed, that these achievements are a clear manifestation of his commitment towards the attainment of Africa’s development objectives and for this we are truly thankful. He expressed his satisfaction for the quality and richness of the discussions that characterized the deliberations.

46. He indicated to the Conference that once the Recommendations are endorsed by the AU Heads of State and Government, it would result in significant strides in the implementation of the continent’s integration and development agenda and thus contribute to the realization of the Abuja Treaty objectives as well as meeting the objectives of the African Union

47. He took this opportunity to invite the Member States, the RECs and other stakeholders to support the current ongoing efforts by the AU Commission to identify innovative sources of financing, underlining the limitations of the current system of funding the Union, which derives mainly from contributions from Member States and Development Partner.

He invited the delegations to resolutely continue their efforts to realize the dream of a united and integrated Africa.

50. He acknowledged, in this respect, the lengthy discussions that took place on the theme of the Conference, which resulted in demystifying some of the fears related to integration and sovereignty and hoped that Member States now appreciate the need for sharing some aspects of their sovereignty with supra-national bodies for common goals.

51. He furthermore underscored that Africa cannot remain isolated from the changes taking place in the World and that the recent global financial and economic crisis and the current sovereign debt crisis in Euro zone should serve as a motivation for African Union Member States’ to strengthen and deepen their integration, taking advantage of the opportunities that can arise in terms of skills, expanded markets and the continent’s population of 1 billion inhabitants. He said that Africa’s population of about 1 billion inhabitants provides a good opportunity for larger markets for goods and services, development and exchange of skills which will be exploited for sustainable economic growth and development and that this is only possible if integration in the continent becomes a reality.

52. Before closing the Conference, he highlighted the need to develop a follow up and evaluation mechanism for the Minimum Integration Programme (MIP) in order to speed up the integration process and invited the Member States, the AU Commission and other stakeholders to exert efforts and make the necessary sacrifices to implement the MIP as well as the recommendations of COMAI V.
